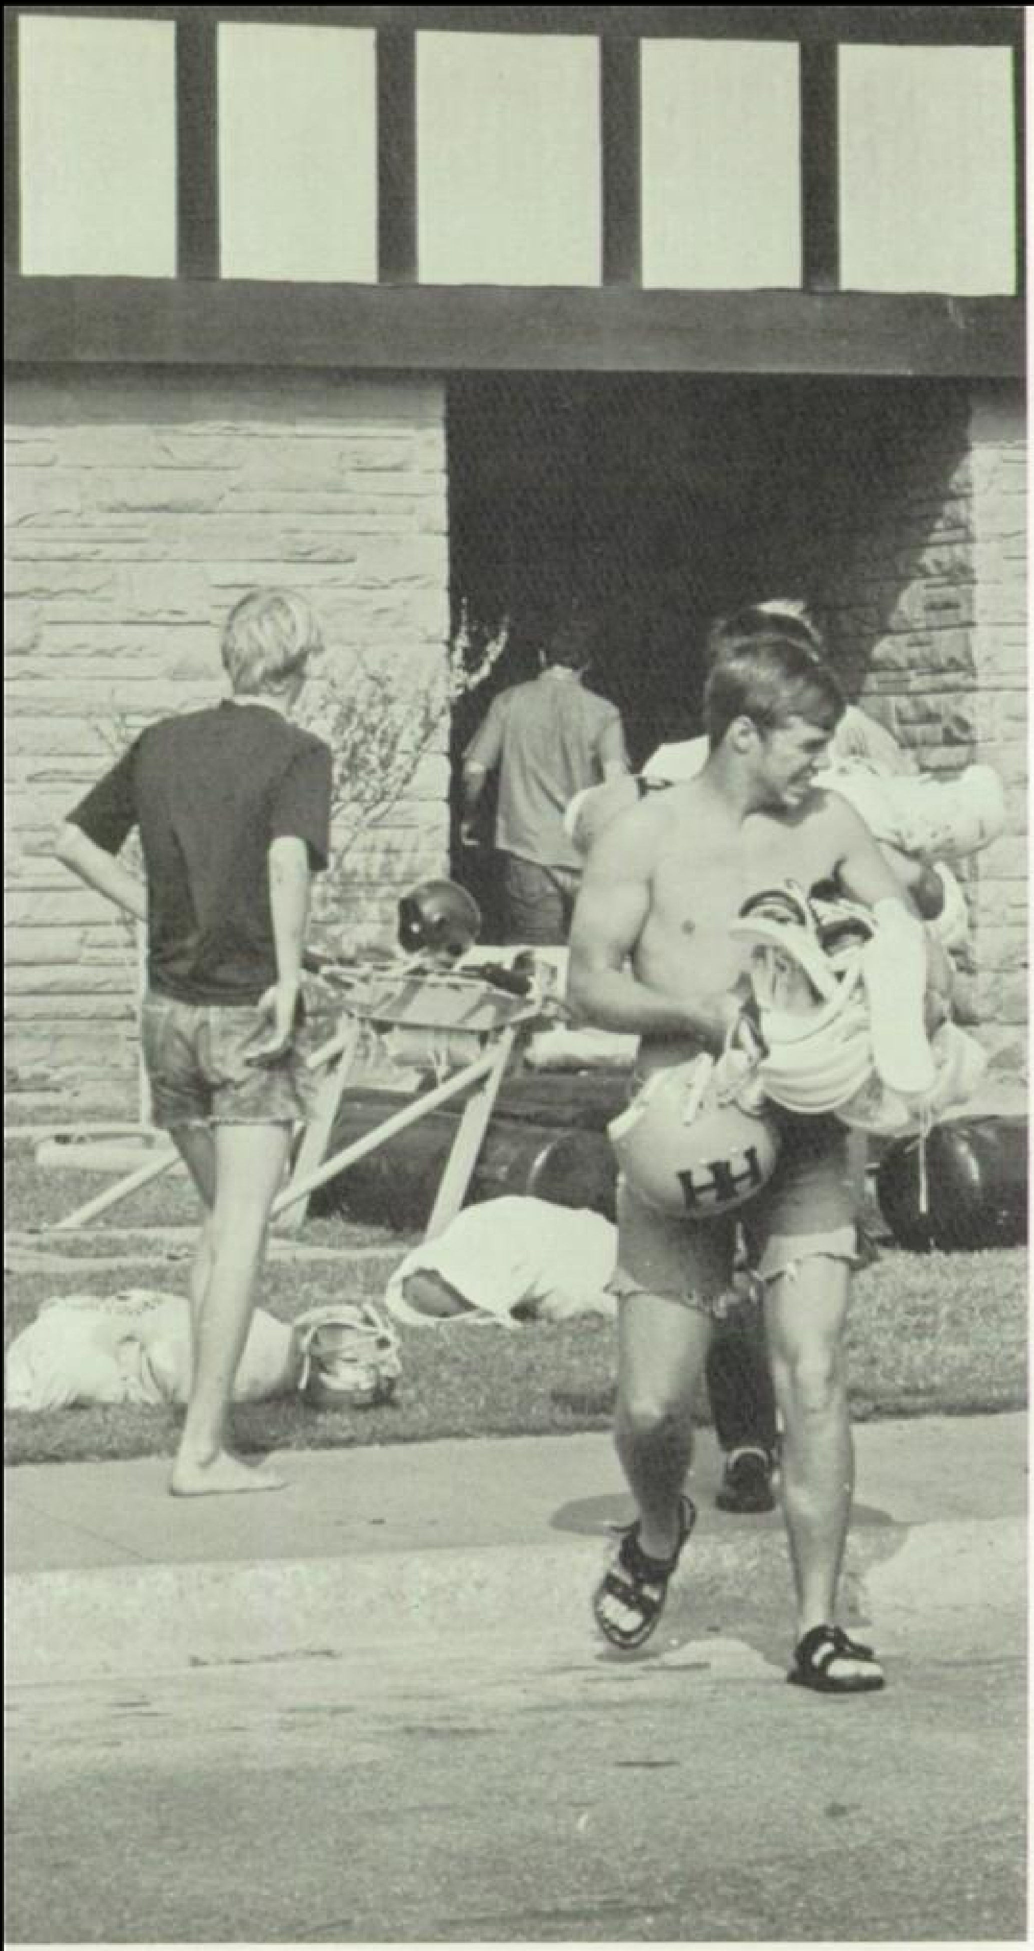
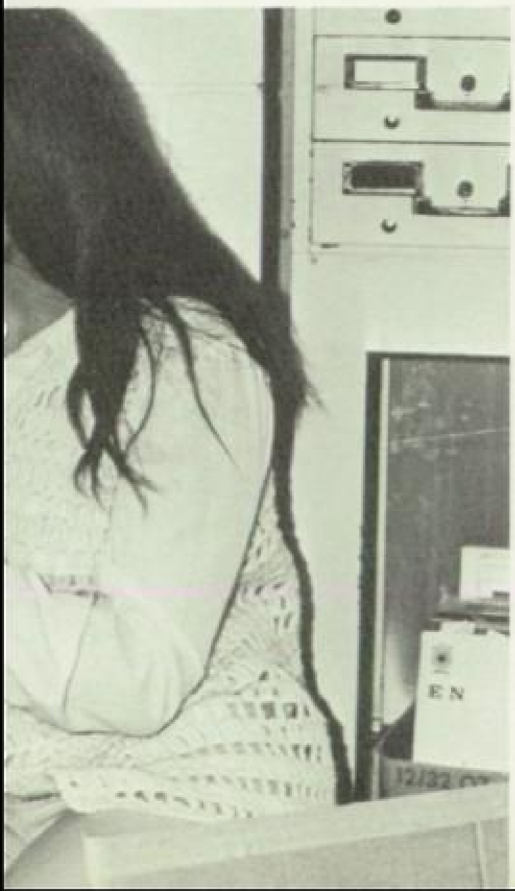
Footballers Have Their Sleds Students Have Their Lockers The Librarian Has Her Library



The addition of a Middle School, taking the Senior High's old home at All Souls' Church posed a problem of transfer of Senior High articles to its new location at First Christian Church. Books, desks, everything pertaining to the Senior High, including its football team was broken down and carried away. Typifying this moment best were the problems coped with by the Senior High football team. Lockering twice a day for two weeks in the Junior High library; the team was forced to evacuate the inadequate facilities when confronted by the school librarian. The move was made with only slight hindrance that being the fact that the coaches had assembled the team's blocking sleds in rooms with doors that were smaller than they looked. The move was made, however, without hardships or serious incident. And school opened right on time. The student body, not accustomed to the hardships suffered by the football team (and the librarian) set up a howl for lockers that went unappeased until the lockers' makers stayed up until all hours building the object in demand. The lockers were built, the football team established and as a fitting end to the dilemma, the librarian locked her doors behind her and grinned.



While At The Middle School

The Middle School not suffering the growing pains experienced by the Senior High, escaped relatively unscathed in the mad moving rush. Only traces of the Senior High gave away the face that they once inhabited the very same rooms as the fifth-graders. Scarred floors, cracked windows and shattered nerves all will mend and be touched by time.

With the vacating of All Souls' by the Senior High, the Middle School moved swiftly and silently.

And to keep it that way the librarian put her foot dow and forced the Junior High's first football squad to fin somewhere else to locker. The only problem now is peanut butter on the books . . .

With a year of preparation, a year of building and planning behind us, everyone was eager to see if in our second year we could muster a feeling of unity and singleness of purpose and establish a tradition in our school.

The culmination of these efforts is one that varies in emotion among all, is personal to the individual. On the following page that story is told in the only way possible . . .

The Long And The Short Of It

Fashion designers wreaked havoc on the school's first written dress code, as they told us that midi's were coming in, and mini's were going out. The greater variety of fashion was accepted unquestioned by a confused administration that found a definition of "Good Taste" elusive, to say the least. But if "Good Taste" was hard to define bad taste wasn't and the dealing with what is acceptable, they dealt with what was not.

The Language Arts, includes the foreign languages as well as our old standby, English. Mrs. McPeek, who returns with us this year is our only old-line English teacher, and Mrs. Frank comes back for more from "South of the Border."

Of the new teachers there is a vast range of background. Mrs. Plath studied in France for several years while Coach Burton was devising tactics for football and English. The language arts instructors, upper and middle schools, with their Shakespeares and Zapatas, DeGaulles, and Caesars teach the language as it is now, as it was, what's wrong with it, and why. In other words, they "learn us to speak and write good."

The social sciences composed mostly of history courses, except for Mr. Ruth's contempory current affairs classes, study the progression, (or regression) of civilization. The story of how man has ridden his wheel down the long lonesome highway of time is often considered a deadly topic, but the teachers feel that history must be taught with some relevance to current problems.

The religion classes study the culture and details behind the facts of globular history. The teachers feel that they have two objectives in class, one is to teach the course, and the other to teach a pupil to relate the course of the path to the road of the future . . . to think.

The fine arts; music, drama, debate, and art, are all taught by artists themselves, who feel obligated to teach art as an emotion, not as a black and white textbook. Involvement is the key word for the fine arts department, as one may find Mrs. Chandley covered from head to toe with potters clay, Mrs. Gifford darting from one side of the room to the other playing all six roles of a Thornton Wilder play, or Mrs. Burton calmly saying, "we debate, we do not argue!" Mrs. Crowe may be heard throughout the day singing, humming, yelling, or crying, while Mrs. Anderson continues to keep a mysterious eye out for anything unusual to do for projects because, "art is you!"

National Forensic League.

The first debate classes at Heritage Hall were held this year under the expert direction of Mrs. Charlene Burton. John Ooley and Beth Houghton brought home some of the first trophies Heritage Hall received. They won first at the Arkansas University and Lawton tournaments. Heritage Hall made its first appearance in the east when it sent a team to the Georgetown tournament in Washington, D. C. Good showings and several trophies were attained by debaters entering extemporaneous speaking. These students were: John Ooley, Beth Houghton, Frank Polk, and Melissa Smith. Novice debaters looking forward to winning trophies at novice tournaments this spring are Criag Hunter, Mark Sims, Melissa Smith, David Dunlap and John Morris. Due to the good showings made by 8th grade debaters in the small school division, we anticipate a strong freshman class next year.

The drama department, under the guidance of Mrs. ZaZelle Gifford, has set a precedent for the classes to come. Compiling a long list of firsts in duets, one acts, and interps, Mrs. Gifford has established herself as "number one" in the state for having compiled the most points in the National Forensic League. These points are the result of the long line of award winning departments that Mrs. Gifford has headed.

The physical education instructors, Mr. John Goss and Mrs. Earlene Sallis of the upper school; and Mrs. Retha Taylor and Mr. Bart Robinson of the middle school, spend long hours devising the unusual games to be played in their various gym classes. Meetings for the club — Entre Nous, meaning "between us," were held at different members homes each month in the evening, for the purpose of getting acquainted with the French language and customs. Activites for Entre Nous included: the Buche de Noel bake sale, the annual Christmas dinner, progressive dinner, a viewing of the play, Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme in Norman, and guests such as a hairdresser from the French speaking part of Switzerland, and the world famous chief, John Bennet. The highlight of the year was the annual spring dinner at the cellar.

Wrestling

A full-fledged wrestling team was an addiion to Heritage Hall this year. Under the intruction of Coach Greg Ruth, the boys fifeen matches and four tournaments. Their eason match standing was seven wins and our losses. The boys found that long hours f hard work and concentration were rearding because of the deep feeling of per-onal accomplishment it gave them. Herige Hall's junior high team made progress uring the year. Through teamwork, it rought the boys a deeper realization of the

PRE-STRESSED CONCRETE CONSTRUCTION MINIMIZES DISASTROUS FIRE DAMAGE

These glaring headlines from Oklahoma newspapers have announced the tragic loss of life and property to Oklahoma citizens.

Pre-stressed concrete construction would have minimized much of this loss . . . because concrete won't burn or twist with the heat.

Insurance underwriters recognize pre-stressed concrete's fire resistance by granting drastically reduced rates on extended coverage and co-insurance policies on pre-stressed buildings.

When you plan a building, no matter how large or small, ask your architect or engineer to investigate Thomas Pre-Stressed Concrete Products.

Don't wait to read about yourself in the headlines.
